“I’ve had the pleasure of working with Ray during my time at Orion Health (mostly when I was taking the role of Product Owner - mid 2015 to early 2017), where we have participated on several internal company projects together.

His great passion for his job and a great attention to detail on every project we've had a chance to collaborate on, is surely something that stands out. Ray is a very meticulous person, always being ahead of schedule, and never compromising on the quality of his work. He is also committed to following the latest trends when it comes to design and user experience, be it on web or mobile. Having had some front-end experience from the past myself, I found his code to be very clean and readable, and being a perfectionist myself - this is something I value highly.

Aside from being a great professional, on a personal side Ray is a very humble person, and it is always a pleasure collaborating with him. He is hard-working and fast-learning, very respectful towards other team members, and shows a great team spirit.

I would gladly recommend him for any project or to any employer, and if I were to start my own company - he'd definitely be the first person I'd reach out to for all things UI/UX related.”

“I am the lead developer at 96black which Raymond has worked at for the past year so had the opportunity to work along side him on most projects. Ray has a great work ethic and good sense of responsibility. He is a hard worker and a quick learner, who would often stay behind to get work completed if he felt it was needed. Whenever, new technology or process was shown to him he'd listen carefully, take notes and then take it on as part of his workflow. He's very friendly and integrated into our team instantly, getting on with everyone very well. If needed please get in touch and I will happily be a technical and character reference for Raymond.”
